

June 09, 2016

Of Course He Did

Drastic Update: Turns out that the Clifford Monteith I've posted about in here is the wrong Clifford Monteith. Same family, same penchant for violence, but the one I wrote about in 2013 died in April of 2014. (I just don't keep up with my murderers like I should. I apologize.) This current Monteith miscreant is much younger. But apparently sticks with the family tradition.*

Many thanks to my smarter-than-me readers who informed me of this error. So, go ahead, read, enjoy.

Clifford Monteith has surfaced again, from the septic swamp of corruption in law enforcement. Investigative Blogger Timothy Charles Homseth dropped a very interesting piece into his dispatches on June 8.

In it he writes about a current episode of Monteith allegedly attacking a Pembina County Deputy, Brad Bowman with a knife, and refers back to a murder I blogged about in 2013

In my 2013 blog I write about Murder being easy if you know and are connected to people in high places. Monteith was the key suspect in a brutal murder and police assured the family that they had enough to put him away permanently for it... and then suddenly evidence disappeared, witnesses recanted--- the usual.

It left Monteith free to get away with it and to murder again, and who knows? He probably has and gotten away with it again... but his attempt on the life of a deputy put him front and center again.

Let's see if his pals can make it all disappear and go away again, shall we?

Timothy Charles Homseth's site is interesting. He digs up a lot of interesting 'coincidences' and he is very capable of connecting the dots. I recommend you drop by for a read, find his other stories and home page and spend some time.

If you know something, drop him a line. I'm sure he will appreciate it.

Of Course He Does

Meanwhile, Monteith is in jail, but I assume, not for long, after all, he knows people in high places and he has stories to tell. True stories. Stories of corruption, connection and protection. If my guess is right, Mr. Monteith has much to fear from those who fear him. Even if they get him out, make the evidence disappear in this case, they'll have to make him disappear too, before he talks and before he's listened to.

Meanwhile, a deputy in Pembina County is learning who is on his side and who is not. I'm sure he's getting weird vibes from people he should feel comfortable around and he's being told that he's under a lot of stress and that he's imagining things.

Of Course It Does

Those drugs that are now killing our greatest treasures: our children, our relatives, our geniuses, musicians, artists.... They are all connected to the corruption that protects murderers, Human Traffickers, Child Rapists, Baby Traffickers.

All these dark and evil forces that plague our society and that leave us with mysteries we cannot solve, are not really mysteries at all. Every aspect of their behavior is known to people in key places, and one way or another, they all connect to the same people in the same groups and they all know each other, and they all cover for each other because they all have something to gain by the suffering continuing and all have something to lose by it being ended, and more to lose by someone talking to save their own ass.

So, while they can, they indulge, they profit, they benefit, and when a domino starts to fall, wobbles a little, commits a murder, or a rape, or worse, cogs, wheels, levers are set in motion to make sure that domino doesn't fall, or if it does fall, it is nowhere near any of the other dominoes.

It's worked for decades, just like that. It still does. Of course it does.

And it will, until we raise our voices, demand accountability, and quit accepting the bullshit they feed us as if we have no curiosity, no choices, no power of our own.

It's election season. Make them answer your questions. About the drug trafficking, the Human Trafficking, the murders, and what they intend to do to stop it. If they don't have a plan, they don't get your vote.

Ask if they are willing to investigate politically powerful, connected persons of past and present. Are they willing to call for an investigation into the 13 Mandated Reports and why they were never investigated? Are they willing to investigate the agencies involved in harassing the whistleblowers who spoke up about crimes against children?

If they aren't willing to start there, they are not willing to fix anything. HOLD THEM ACCOUNTABLE.

As long as they think you will be silent, or that they won't have to answer questions, the stories will always be a lie and the darkness will continue to touch every aspect of our lives, be it our children, our families, or those whose brilliance and genius are snuffed out while those behind the curtains profit, benefit, and take a bow.

We must, collectively become more aware.

It starts with the children. If we can't save them, we have no future. If we can't save those children we can't save our children.

Beeswax

It's time to stop being distracted by issues that are none of our beeswax. What two consenting adults do in the privacy of their own home, not our beeswax. A woman needs or wants an abortion because of rape or poverty or for any reason is a decision she does not come to lightly, despite being depicted as slutty or evil or "baby killing". It's not your beeswax. All those things are distractions to make you think you are voting for or protecting some sacred aspect of life, and it is brought to you by people who cut benefits to poor mothers and children, so they will starve. They demonize the poor and make them unable to work their way out of poverty or protect themselves from predatory policies designed to keep them as the designated targets of anger and stochastic violence, all the while turning our eyes away from the real evils that thrive among us, stealing our future, one child at a time, or a thousand at a time, we can no longer keep an accurate count because the real suffering of real children is politically ignored and ignored by media.

We become distracted politically. But we are smarter than that. We are capable of waking up and being wise to the deceptions and capable of focusing on what we know is wrong, what we know is the cause of all that ails us.

And that, my friends, is OUR BEESWAX.

So, instead of making the poor, the immigrants, or different races and religions the enemy, let's look at who is really hurting our society and shaping it into more broken pieces. It's not the poor. It's not the teachers. It's not the unions. It's not the women who need health care and it's not the clinics and doctors who provide the care. It's not the gay, the transgender, the disabled... it's those who protect criminals.

Stop feeding the hate. Start drinking from the waters of life. We will find our common good, our greater strength and our more secure future on our common ground.

Any politician, any preacher, any 'friend' tries to make you hate someone who has done no harm, but just believes differently than you, loves differently than you or has needs different from your own, walk away. If you stay with them you are feeding the darkness. You are weakening yourself. You are less able to protect or help the children, any children, even your own.

And when the darkness comes for your child, and your life is turned inside out and your pain becomes a hardened shell around your life, know that you could have, long ago, today, done something to change that trajectory, but that you chose instead to do nothing. Welcome it. You own it.

This is ours. This is our time. This is our Beeswax and we need to attend to it because if we don't, it will become poisoned and surround us, like a cell.

You know where to find me.

~Cat